INTRODUCTION TO THE SURVEY

The State and Federal Survey is a compilation of information about administrative rules publications in the United States and its jurisdictions (states, territories, protectorates, etc.). The Survey is arranged alphabetical by state or jurisdiction. It includes a table of contents.

This survey is current as of February 1999. Questionnaires were returned for 47 jurisdictions. Questionnaires were not returned for, and information is not included for: Alabama, American Samoa, Connecticut, District of Columbia, Guam, Hawaii, Kansas (Administrative Code survey only), Mississippi, Northern Mariana Islands, Puerto Rico, Rhode Island (Administrative Code survey only), Virgin Islands, and Vermont (Administrative Code survey only).

Requests for copies of the Survey may be directed to: Kathy Lubke, Deputy for Administrative Rules, Montana Secretary of State's Office, P.O. Box 202801, Helena, MT 59620-2801, by e-mail directed to Kathy Lubke at klubke@state.mt.us, or by phone at 406-444-5596 or fax at 406-444-5833. Copies of the survey are $40 each. Surveys will be mailed after payment is received. Any questions concerning the information in the Survey may also be sent to the address above or to the offices within the various jurisdictions.

ABOUT ADMINISTRATIVE CODES AND REGISTERS

The Administrative Codes and Registers (ACR) Section began in 1978 as an organization of administrative code and register government publishers meeting under the aegis of the National Association of Secretaries of State (NASS). In a majority of the states, the rules filing or publication function is located within the Secretary of State's Office. In the remaining jurisdictions, the function may be located elsewhere in the executive branch, in the legislative branch, in the judicial branch, or in an independent agency. Government entities represented in the membership of ACR include most of the states, territories, protectorates, and the federal government.

Currently, ACR members include personnel involved with every aspect of administrative rules. Rule editors, reviewers (from the legislative and executive branches, and independent agencies), legal counsel, and even agency rule writers round out today's membership. Non-voting members of ACR include private sector rule publishers, compilers, and database editors from various organizations involved with administrative rules.

ACR holds its regular meetings in conjunction with the NASS conferences, with separate sessions and speakers, but joint meals and socials. This arrangement has benefitted both organizations in terms of attracting sponsors and lower per capita costs. Networking among state rules personnel is an important objective of the conferences. ACR sessions normally focus on legal issues in rulemaking; printing, marketing, and distribution strategies; and advances in computer and publication technology. Sessions include panels, demonstrations, and speakers of national reputation. Normally, the summer conference is held in July or August and includes about 24 hours of educational sessions attended by 50-75 members from as many as 40 jurisdictions.

ACR is a national organization relying upon NASS to provide administrative support. The ACR bylaws provide for the biennial election of a President and Vice President, and the appointment of other offices. The organization is divided into eight regions, each with a regional representative or chairperson who facilitates communication and promotes regional conferences among the state administrative rules staffs within the region. Regional conferences, like the national conference, are supported by sponsors, usually businesses involved in the publication of administrative rules.

ACR produces the State and Federal Survey, a survey of codes and registers, comprehensively documenting the operations of the state and federal administrative rules "gatekeepers," publishers, and reviewers. Sale of the survey is ACR's primary source of income for administration and extraordinary expenses.

More information about ACR is available on the Internet at http://www.nass.org/acr/.

1. Each agency is responsible for publishing its own rules. There is no official publisher of the entire Code. The Division assists agencies in preparing a publishable certified copy of the rules in the mandatory uniform format for publishing after the rules are filed with the Division and effective. The Division maintains a complete Code of all current effective rules. Rules on the Division's web site are the certified copy of rules.

ADMINISTRATIVE REGISTER:
Ohio Monthly Record, Register of Ohio
Note: Beginning July 3, 2000, the Legislative Service Commission (LSC) will publish the Register of Ohio, an on-line gazette providing public notice of agency rule-making on the Internet. The Register will publish the text and notices of public hearings concerning rules proposed under the state Administrative Procedure Act. The URL for the Register had not been finalized as of the date of this survey, but it will be accessible through a link on LSC's home page, http://www.lsc.state.oh.us. The only adopted rules that will appear in the Register are emergency rules adopted under the Administrative Procedure Act. The text of all other adopted rules will continue to be published voluntarily by private publishers in the Ohio Monthly Record. There is no contractual relationship with the published of the Ohio Monthly Record.

Ohio Administrative Code
NOTE: Ohio does not itself publish the Ohio Administrative Code. It is published by private publishers, voluntarily. Agencies file rules with Legislative Service Commission (LSC). LSC ensures the rules are correct as to form, and forwards them to the several private publishers. There is no contractual relationship. LSC has answered questions for which LSC has information.

Other Code information:

Clarifications: (1) Users of the Internet edition of the Utah Administrative Code provided by the Division may subscribe to WebWatch, a service that will notify them by E-mail of changes to either the HTML, PDF, or PKZip versions of the Code.

(2) As far as the Division is aware, several publishers provide access to the complete administrative code. LEXIS Law Publishing produces Utah Law on Disc, a CD-ROM product, which includes the Utah Administrative Code Annotated. LEXIS Law Publishing also makes the same data available over the Internet. The Utah Administrative Code is also available on-line from Code-Co Law Publishers, LEXIS/NEXIS and Westlaw.

(3) Annotations (e.g., case law references, amendment histories) and indexes are only available in the print and electronic versions of the Utah Administrative Code prepared by the publisher, LEXIS Law Publishing.

APPENDIX B: INTERNET ACCESS TO ADMINISTRATIVE RULES

Definitions vary among the jurisdictions. In the following table, "Home Page" refers to the main page for the agency directly responsible for receiving rule filings, publishing rules, or both. This may be a bureau or an office several layers down in an organization. When that agency does not have a home page, then an Internet address (Uniform Resource Locator or URL) may not be listed, or the URL may point to the agency next up in line in the organization chart. "Register" refers to publications like the Federal Register which may contain notice and/or full text of proposed and adopted rules, and/or other types of government notices. The use of the term Register includes similar publications which, in some jurisdictions, may be called Bulletin or Journal. "Administrative Code" refers to publications like the Code of Federal Regulations which contain all effective administrative rules. "Manual" refers to the guidance document produced to assist rulewriting agencies.

Each jurisdiction is listed below. If a URL appears in the columns across from the name of the jurisdiction, information is available on the Internet. If a URL does not appear, that means that ACR is unaware of information on-line for the jurisdiction.

Current Internet access information is available on-line on the Administrative Codes and Registers Section's web site at http://www.nass.org/ acr/acrdir.htm.
