BACKGROUND

Administrative rules affect all citizens. They are the tools through which the executive branch of government implements or interprets legal mandates.

Administrative Codes and Registers (ACR), a section of the National Association of Secretaries of State (NASS), created the Robert J. Colborn, Jr. Innovation Award in July 2001 in honor of Robert J. Colborn, Jr.

Mr. Colborn was the administrator of the Maryland Division of State Documents from July 1, 1974 through March 31, 2001. In that role, Mr. Colborn led the staff of the Division to make substantial contributions to the publication and accessibility of administrative rules. He shared ideas developed in Maryland with his colleagues across the country. In 1978, Mr. Colborn founded ACR. His influence is seen in rulemaking publications and processes nationwide.

PURPOSE

The Robert J. Colborn, Jr. Innovation Award continues in the spirit of Mr. Colborn's efforts for jurisdictions (state, federal, territorial, or protectorate governments) to share ideas with other jurisdictions to improve administrative rulemaking.

The Colborn Award annually recognizes a program that demonstrates creativity and innovation in providing public access to, or managing, administrative rules.

This includes substantial contributions to the flow of information to the public. This effort will help improve efficiency and delivery of exceptional services to citizens, businesses, and other governmental entities.

ELIGIBILITY

The Colborn Award recognizes a government entity responsible for implementing a program that demonstrates creativity and innovation in providing public access to, or managing, administrative rules. A nomination may recognize other groups, vendors, and individuals involved in the development or implementation of the program, but the award is made to the entity responsible for the program. Nominations can be from a government entity at the state or federal level.

- The government entity being nominated must have an active member of ACR on its staff.
- The nominations process is open -- anyone may nominate a program for the award.
- A program that is nominated, but that does not receive the award, may be re-nominated in a subsequent year.
- A jurisdiction with a member serving on the ACR Awards Committee is ineligible to receive the award during that member's term of service on the awards committee.
- A program that has been in place for several years may be nominated -- there is no connection between program implementation date and a nomination.

EXAMPLES OF PROGRAMS

The following are examples of programs eligible for consideration:

- Use of technology to improve public participation in the rulemaking process.
- Use of technology to improve public access to rulemaking documents.
- Publication of a first edition of an administrative code or register.
- Public outreach to educate citizens regarding the rulemaking process.

CONSIDERATION CRITERIA AND NOMINATION PROCEDURES

The ACR Awards Committee, consisting of three ACR members appointed by the President, considers nominations and selects the winner by unanimous consent. The criteria for the committee are set forth in ACR Bylaws, effective as amended July 2017.

EVALUATION PROCESS

The following evaluation measures will be considered:

- Is the information concise and complete? Does it include all the required elements for submission?
- Does it demonstrate excellence and continued development to the improvement of the operation of government? Does it exemplify vision and creativity?
- Does it provide a useful service to state, regional or federal governmental operations? Does it provide a useful service to another jurisdiction, such as territories or protectorates? Does it provide a useful service to the citizens?
- Is the idea or concept an original idea? If not, the nominee must demonstrate how the improvement is unique. For example, is it new technology, new operating or new management practices?
- Nominees must also demonstrate the significance of the idea or program, its effectiveness and practical applicability.

Biography - Robert J. "Bob" Colborn, Jr.

Robert J. "Bob" Colborn, Jr., was the primary moving force behind the creation of the Administrative Code and Registers (ACR) section of NASS in 1978. He was an active member for more than 23 years.

Bob served as the ACR's first executive secretary. He served as host ACR member for the NASS ACR annual conferences held in Annapolis, Maryland in 1984 and in Baltimore, Maryland in 2000.

He set high standards for administrative code and register publications and expected no less from his peers in ACR. He presented many programs at NASS ACR annual conferences and was recognized by ACR for his achievements.

Bob was a native of Maryland's Eastern Shore. Born March 12, 1936, in Salisbury to the late Robert J. and Marion (Tyler) Colborn, Bob was a graduate of Washington College B.S., University of Rhode Island M.A. in History, and University of Virginia J.D. Before entering law school, Bob conducted historical research for the U.S. Department of the Interior.

He was a member of the Maryland Bar Association, was admitted to the Maryland Bar in 1967, and practiced law before joining the staff of the Maryland Secretary of State. When he joined the Maryland Office of the Secretary of State in 1974 he founded the Maryland Division of State Documents and served as Administrator. Bob led the Maryland Division of State Documents for 27 years before retiring in 2001.

As historian for the National Park Service from 1963-1964 he published the two reports key to the 1976 bicentennial restoration of Congress Hall in Philadelphia and the Old Senate Chamber and Old Supreme Court Chamber of U.S. Capitol Building, Washington D.C.

Bob passed on January 23, 2014, at the age of 77. He is remembered by his ACR friends as a man who had a passion for rules and was a history and cultural enthusiast always willing to share his knowledge with others.
